Other ways to feed back

The Friends and Family Test (FFT) is available for a number of NHS services, including hospitals, GP practices and mental health services. The FFT is an anonymous and quick way for you to provide feedback about the service provided to you. Please ask at reception of a FFT Form.

There are other more in-depth national survey programmes you might be invited to take part in to find out about your experience of the NHS. The Patient Reported Outcome Measures (PROMs) questionnaire is just one example. PROMs invites patients who've recently had a hip or knee replacement, varicose vein surgery, or groin hernia surgery to give feedback on the care they received.

The NHS choices website invites you to comment, feed back, or even rate NHS services or facilities. On this website you can comment on health and social care services in England. Simply use the Services near you tool and select a service. You can either leave an overall star rating or post a review for other patients to see. Please visit our NHS Choices website to leave a review.
